THINKING OUT LOUD

By H. M. L.

We shall have to wait and see what General Marshall, new secretary of state, proposes to do with our relations to China. One commentator on the radio, the other morning considered our cutting loose from Chinese affairs, a bacwkard step. We had gone into China to whip the Japs out of it, and staed awhile after the war was over to see if the differences between Chang Kai Shek's government and the Communist minority could not be composed. Marshall, who spent nearly a year there ought to know what the trouble is, and he has ordered the troops, mainly Marinesbome and so to speak is leaving China to stew in its own odoriferous juices.

At the moment it looks very much as if we were returning to isolationism. Our intentions of aiding China to become, in fact as fell as in fiction, one of the "big five," were good intentions. But as often happens in our adventures with the rest of the would it just didn't work even though we had General Marshall on the job. As we see it, it was a case of sending more troos in and really waging a war on the side of the Nathought government or taking the troops we had there and let our friend Chang Kai Shek fight it out with the Communists.

Whether this will leave the field open for Russia to exploit, or not, remains to be seen. General Marshall, of course, would know a lot about that contingency, and we doubt if he proposes to acquiesce in Russian aid to the Comunist guerillas in China. It is well within the realm of possibilities that we shall aid the Nationalist government with food and tools of war, without sacrificing the lives o our boys. This country is never really interested in a war unless the majority of us believes our liberties in one way or another are at stake.

And just supposing we did pour "pacification" troops into China to aid in putting down the Communist rebellion, what would Russia think of that? While Russia doesn't hesitate to promote Communism, no one yet on a world wide scale has thrown down the gauntlet and invited her to like it or lump it. As we look back over recent pages in history, we note that Russia has been aggressive when it seemed expedient. Russia, for instance, went unofficially to war on the side of the Communists in Spain's civil war, while Germany and Italy waged war successfully on the side of the Falangists. And, very recently, it will be recalled, Russia maintained troops in Iran, and very reluctantly withdrew them. Yet Russia cried to heaven when the U. S. Army and Navy maintained a few thousand troops in China, mainly for the honest purpose of seeing that the Japs got out.

In both these armed thrusts Russia was worsted, but as the leadership thinks, it was but a temporary setback. Russia can wait, recover its shattered strength and when the time seems propitious go at it again. We have not too much confidence in these statesmen who insist that democracy and communism can live peacefully in the same orld. Democracy is more a way of life than it is a religion. Communism is more a religion than it is a way of life. And faith in it, by those who live under the Communist flag, is a fanatical faith. The Moslem dervishes of the Near East are not more fanatical than Moletov reveals himself to be in his negotiations with members of the Big Four.

It might be worth while to note in this connection that France is swinging Russian-ward. The Communists, at the present rate soon will be in control of the government and that government will be much more friendly to Russia than even the present one. Note also that the British Labor government is making very friendly gestures in the direction of Moscow. Now just where do these developments leave the U. S. A., with China, busy with its civil war, completely powerless to wield any influence in world afairs? Just where are we heading in this global dilemna? Well, we hope that Secretary of State Marshall knows the answer.

REV. MOORE TO LEAVE HERE IN MARCH; RETURNS TO PHILIPPINES

NEVADA CITY: Rev. Joseph W. Moore, Methodist minister, last week received word that he and Mrs. Moore are to be transferred from Nevada City. Eventual designation of the popular minister is to be Vigan, Northern Luzon, Philippine Islands where he and Mrs. Moore expect to return to his former post of district missionary at this provincial capital, a city of 17,000.

The Methodist population at Vigan and the surrounding area totals 15,000. Rev. Moore's work there will be primarily co-ordinative and supervisory.

The directive was received from the Methodist Board of Missions and Church Extension. Immediate plans call for the Moores to enter the Pacific School of Religion in Berkeley on March 24th. There, at the interdenominational religious school, they will take a refresher course in missionary work. In the summer they will attend a week long conference for "furloughed missionaries" in Greencastle, Indiana.

The Moores first engaged in missionary work in the Philippines in 1916. During the second World War, they were interned, prisoners of the Japanese, in the Los Banos concentration camp near Manila.

The Moores have been in Nevada City since August 17, 1945. Rev. Moore succeeded Rev. David Ralston in the Methodist pulpit here. He has been very active in civic afairs as well as ably directing the Methodist church. In recent weeks he has been a leader in the movement to provide a recreation program for Nevada City youth.

The many friends of the Moores regret their transfer and wish them great success in their new station.

TWO MEN HURT WHEN THEIR PLANE CRACKS UP IN G. V.

GRASS VALLEY: Two Sacramento fliers, Art and Paul Herron, brothers residing at 1229 U Street, are in the Jones Memorial Hospital here, recovering from injuries suffered when their plane cracked up Saturday at 4:30 p. m. as they were taking off for the return flight.

The plane, a Culver V, 1946 model according to George Endter, manager of the Grass Valley Flying Service, lifted but about 10 feet as it left the runway. The plane severed one small pine, lost a wing in the branches of a second tree, and crashed upside down at the foot of a third tree, completely wrecked.

The two brothers, cut and bruised, were removed to the hospital where last evening their condition was reported as satisfactory.

The plane was rented from the Capital Sky Park on Stockton Boulevard, Sacramento.

Endter said he thought the accident was caused by failure to set the propeller for taking off speed. Instead, he said, the propeller was set probably for cruising.

Endter reported a second accident on the same day, when Milton Sharkey flying his own plane, a Stinson 105, from Marysville, while landing, failed to leave himself room for stopping and ran off the runway into the brush. Sharkey, according to Endter, was not licensed for solo flights. The plane was but little damaged and Sharkey was shaken up but not hurt. Endter reported that these have been the only accidents on the airfield, since he became manager 14 months ago..

Containing 17 claims, the Arctic was developed nearly 40 years ago by the late Martin Vanberg and produced a considerable amount of gold. Ore mined in the Washington Chief claim said to have averaged about $17 a ton. Eight veins have been developed and the mine is said to contain substantial reserves of milling ore.

Work continues to be conducted vigorously at the Gaston property by the Tonopah Divide Mining Company of Nevada. PRINTING

Like everything else in American industrial life, printing has in recent decades undergone an amazing increase in specialization. In that respect it resembles, oddly enough, the medical profession.

In the big cities are doctors who concentrate on the most advanced refinements and specialties of medicine—brain surgery, physoneurelogy, skin diseases and many others; in small towns like Nevada City and Grass Valley, physicians have to be prepared to contact their adversary, Disease, in any form.

So it is with printers. In the big cities are printers who confine their interests solely to windshield stickers, others to labels, some to books, and some to atistic printng, most of which is set by hand.

In country printshops like the Nugget, the printers, compositors, linotypists and pressmen are not specialists in some narrow field like matchbooks or salesbooks which are turned out by vast, mindless machines—they are general practitioners of the art of printing, and can carry the case through from diagnosis to wrapping. They efficiently print anything from a cheap handbill on newsprint to a fancy folder in several colors, with a wealth of illustration on highly coated slick paper. —H. M. L. Jr.

JUST WONDERIN'

I wonder when a butterfly
Soars through the ambient air,
Tip-tilting in the garden close,
Or loitering here and there;
If, on the ground a crawling thing
Sniffs with a spiteful squirm,
"I knew that brazen, creature once—
She used to be a worm."

We who live on the higher, or human plane, are so accustomed to displays of jealousy, envy and spite among our fellows, that we do not wonder when we see these unlovely traits displayed by the socalled. lower animals. Therefore, it is quite conceivable that those lovely flowers of the air, butterflies might excite the envy of creatures less fortunate than themselves; in fact, might possess some unlovely characteristics of their own.

I don't know much about butterflies, though I have seen several elaborate collections on exhibition in California museums. Some of the specimens were so unbelievably lovely, that I was tempted to doubt their reality. and it well may be that in all the realm of nature, there is nothing so exquisite as many butterflies are known to be..

Once, long ago, some one told me that there were religious cults in the Orient whose adherents believed the emperor moth and other winged cretures of his ilk. were the souls of those who had passed on into that bourn of which Mr. Shakespeare wrote. I, being young and gullible, gave credence to the superstition and once, when I met a great white moth which acted very human, my belief was in a measure, confirmed.

Very soon now, these lovely flowers of the upper air, will be floating about our gardens, lighting upon our choicest roses and lending life and color to even the dullest corners.

I wonder now, in the light of fading superstition. if they are souls of flowers that faded long ago; it is so difficult to rid one's self entirely of superstition; remnants of tattered childish beliefs, are almost sure to linger still.

However, I do persist in thinking of butterflies as flowers of the air and perhaps they are looked upon with envy by the less favored earth bound blossoms of our gardens and certainly by the creatures that crawl upon the ground below.

One thing more about butterflies and moths; I dislike to hear of dainty, sylph like creatures, armed with nets, prancing across the landscape all intent upon capturing and destroying the marvelous grace and beauty which they pursue. How much does a butterfly suffer when caught in a net and later treated to a dose of chloroform before being pinned down upon a bit of cardboard? I don't know but once a literary genius said,— "the worm you crush beneath your feet, in its corporal existence, feels a pang as great as when a giant dies." Poetic fantasy? Maybe, but when there are so many evil things to be destroyed, so many noxious grᵒwths to be uprooted, why wage war upon those most lovely visitants to our gardens, fields and hills.—the butterflies.—Adeline Merriam Conner.

BROAD STREET

By Harley M. Leete, Jr.

Bert Foreman thinks the youth program should be closely co-ordinated with the park program. "There's some talk" says Bert, "about the park being located too far from the center of town. But I don't know where anyone is going to find a recreation center at Broad and Pine Street."

"The park," continues Bert, "has a good start towards being scuh a center. One of the immediate necessities there is lighting for night baseball. The diamond should be improved and bleachers are needed. The Chamber of Commerce already has a fund to be used toward this purpose."

The town's most dapper lumberman: Cedric S. Porter, with matching jacket and duck hunters cap of red and black paid. Guest Broad Street columnist in the immediate future will be Donald Robert Paine, Zion Street householder, with an 800-word epic on Saturday in (you guessed it) Nevada City. Why does Fred Charles Garrison, Nevada City Notebook author, and Elks Times editor, have the latter printed in PURPLE ink?

Sharpest gadget for miles around: The new Micro 16 camera at Harris drug store. Just like it says in the ads its only the size of a package of cigarettes. Knothead note to advertising salesmen: Don't break the Alpha's glassware while selling ads to Alpha's William C. Briggs (I did).

The town is ready for an invasion of artists now, with TWO local stores carrying art supplies, colors brushes, tempera, oils. For a long time we had the idea of devoting a column to "Who Is the Twin Cities' Best Dressed Man." Bpt, after listing C. Raymond Clinch of Grass Valley and E. Merritt Rector of Nevada City, we discovered we'd completely run out of well-dressed men, let alone "best-dressed". As for who is the county's best dressed woman, why there you have the shoe on the other foot and my neck out on a limb. Let us leave this subject.

Don't be surprised if there's a resurgence of Young Republicanism in Nevada County. And You Know Who will be right in there pitching when there is. Senator William F. Knowland and Lieutenant Governor Goodwin Knight both made a big impression on young Republicans in this area.

Richest thirteen year old in town is Cyrus Martin Rollins, Jr., who carries that certain paper and pockets about eighteen skins per month. This junior Croesus not only owns a new bicycle, but a half-interest in a silver and black 1929 Chevrolet. Migawd, where will the kid be when he's 23. When my generation (harumph) was 13 we were lucky to have a nickel for candy and even then, never spent it all in the same place.

Snow is nothing in the life of Jimmy Orlando, former pro wrestler now working with George Montgomery in promoting the wrestling bouts at the Memorial Hall in Grass Valley. Orlando appeared in the snowy reaches of Glenbrook the other day, clad in open-toed sandals. Ah, these Southern Californians!

Going over old newspaper files impresses one with the very high mortality of small businesses. Only a handful of the dvertisers in the Nugget in 1927 are still with us. The rest of the business houses and their owners and managers are gone—where?

QUICK METHOD OF DEFROSTING

To defrost your rerigerator quickly, first remove all the food from the cabinet and the freezing compartment, says the General Electric Consumers Institute, and turn the temperature control to the "off" position. Remove the ice cubes from the trays and place in a bowl. Place trays filled with hot water in the freezing compartment and close the door. In about ten minutes the frost around the freezing unit should be loose to peel right off with a spatula or wooden (not sharp) stick.

FAT DRIPPINGS

To make practical use of the fat you save season vegetables much as green beans, corn or spinach with bacon or sausage drippings. Drippings from roasted or broiled meats and poultry are used in sauces for scalloped dishes or to baste lean meats while cooking.

THE BEGINNING

Veterans Administration homes for disabled or aged veterans had their origin in the National Asylum for Disabled Volunteer Soldier's established in 1865 at the end of the Civil War.

NEVADA COUNTY GETS FUNDS FOR FAIR

GRASS VALLEY: The 17th District Agricultural Association of Nevada County has received a check for $65,000 as its share of the July 1st apportionment of the state parimutuel funds allocated to county and district fairs.

The Nevada County Fair directors are awaiting the completion of a master plan drawn by the State Division of Architecture for the Watt Park tract of 70 acres which is to be converted to uses of the district fair.

Reorganization of the 17th District Agricultural Association will take place February 23rd. U. S. N. Johnson of Nevada City is president of the board. Loyle Freeman, fair manager, leaves this week for the California Polytechnic College where he will attend the annual Western Fairs College, instituted for the purpose of training fair managers.

U. C. SEEKS BRIDGE IN MAN'S ANCESTRY

BERKELEY: An evolutionary skeleton in man's closet, locked in the hard lime stone of South African caves, may bridge the gap between man and his predeseccors, Dr. Charles L. Camp, professor of paleontology at the University of California, said today.

Dr. Camp, one of the nation's leading paleontogists disclosed details of the objectives of the scientific expedition now being organized at the University of California under his supervision to take the field in South Africa this summer. The expedition is being financed from private funds.

He said the primary purpose of the expedition is to search more thoroughly for fossil remains of specimens of "map-apes" found recently in three locations near Johannesburg..

From what is now known, Camp stated some of the specimens may be anywhere from half a million to three million years old.

"These specimens are very provocative", Camp stated. "From fragments so far recovered there remain many questions as to how to place them in the scale of evolution of man and there may still be some doubt that they are man's ancestors."

Specimens so far recovered were blasted out of limestone caves in mining operations. The scientists of the expedition will drill into the hard rock to try to recover whole specimens of the man-ape.

CALIFORNIA REDWOOD MAY MIGRATE SOMEDAY

BERKELEY: The California redwood which has migrated from continent to continent like the dinosaur and other prehistoric animals, may someday again "take to the road."

But it won't happen for several hundred lifetimes, at least, and possibly not for millions of years, says Dr. Ralph W. Chaney, professor of paleontology on the Berkeley campus of the Uneversity of California, in a publication for the Save the Redwoods League.

Chaney, who is the world's leading authority on the redwoods, says fossil records show that about 50 million years ago the redwood lived in Alaska, Asia and Europe. Due to climatic changes the redwood migrated south and is now confined only to California.

Dr. Chaney says that a Chinese scientist, Dr. H. H. Hu, recently discovered in China three living sequoia like trees which are closely related to California redwoods. This tree, Meta sequoia once existed in America and fossil remains of it have been long known.

The Oregon Caves national monument in Oregon, was established by President Taft's proclamation in 1909..
